Orrie-

I just got off a call with the PSC where they asked me questions for over half an hour! Whew!!

I did get the sense that the commission was acting in good faith.

I also heard that out of all the comments just one was in favor of the Dominion plan. I happened to be online when he spoke. His comment was that "everyday Bubba's in SC shouldn't have to shoulder the extra costs for new technologies that didn't benefit them. One of the panelists seemed to know him personally. When the panel began to ask him questions, he hung up.

There's your PSC Thursday update.

Now, when are we gonna install those Tesla batteries...?

 To whom it may concern:

I appreciate this chance to voice my concerns about Dominion Energy's desire to change the financial terms regarding the solar energy industry in South Carolina.

The proposed tariff is neither fair nor balanced. It will likely prevent many in the community from being able to afford to invest in renewable solar energy.

The request by Dominion clearly violates the Energy Freedom Act in many ways.

The claims by Dominion that they have been burdened by unfair costs for connection are both specious and irrelevant. As a current solar customer, I was connected before and I am currently connected. Plus, Dominion was aware of the existence of these solar panels when they chose to buy SCEG.

Lastly, I believe that this over reach by Dominion will decimate an important, growing component of our economy, stifle innovation, and lead to a world of less choice, higher costs and lower quality of life.

Please do the right thing for all our citizens and deny Dominion's new tariff request.

Sincerely,

Emmett Lynch
